BACKGROUND & KEY ISSUES
In Asia and the Pacific, there are about 705 million young people aged 15 to 24, representing about 15 percent of the region's total population and 60 per cent of the world's youth. As the world rapidly approaches a more dynamic and complex future, something will never change: youth's limitless potential. With major global crises continuing to exacerbate poverty and disparities, a collective and intergenerational solidarity, focusing on the most vulnerable, is needed more than ever. In these challenging times, youth, in particular, are essential innovators and agents of change; their brave ideas, bold action, and genuine excitement and commitment are strong indicators that they are ready to overcome any barriers that stand in the way of achieving the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) and upholding the overarching promise of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development to leave no one behind. Yet, young people remain at the margins of policymaking. Youth-led innovations tend to be under-resourced and overlooked, and their unique talents, creativity, and entrepreneurial spirit continue to be an untapped resource. Young people are essential to realizing inclusive and sustainable development and economic productivity.

Many young people across Asia and the Pacific are struggling to access quality education and decent employment opportunities. Youth employment challenges and persistent poverty force young people to migrate for better opportunities. Often, regular pathways for young people to migrate do not exist. At the same time, countries are affected by brain drain and the exodus of young people from rural areas. Young people are a major driving force for sustainable development in every country and the greatest asset that should not be lost. Furthermore, given the rapid aging of the population in the region, and since the youth of today will be the older persons of tomorrow, it is important to focus on harmonious and supportive intergenerational relations.

It is not just a moral imperative, but an economic necessity to unleash the energy, entrepreneurial spirit, and technological genius of the youth. The green economy offers an opportunity, not only to preserve the environment and increase resilience but also to foster decent youth employment opportunities, young people should have access to the right skills development and entrepreneurial opportunities, combined with supportive policies and effective employment services for connecting job seekers with job opportunities in the green economy. Intergenerational solidarity must ensure that young people can look at the future with hope and they can fulfil their expectations.

Against this backdrop, the Asia-Pacific regional session aims to spark conversation on the most pressing issues from a youth lens and explore youth-led solutions to Goal 1 (No poverty); Goal 2 (Zero hunger); Goal 13 (Climate action); Goal 16 (Peace, justice, and strong institutions) and Goal 17 (Partnership for the Goals).

Building on the outcomes of the 2024 Asia-Pacific Forum for Sustainable Development \(APFSD\) Youth Forum and the Youth Climathon: Innovative Solutions for the Acceleration of Climate Action at the 11th APFSD, the discussion will highlight the role of young people and young professionals as innovators and will present key recommendations for effective intergenerational, intersectional, and gender-inclusive solutions to accelerate the full implementation of the 2030 Agenda.

OVERVIEW OF PREPARATORY EVENT/CONSULTATION

This event will build on the outcomes of two major events that took place in February 2024:

- The 2024 APFSD Youth Forum: aligned with the theme of the APFSD and of the HLPF, it placed special emphasis on innovation solutions, including presenting a showcase of youth solutions during the event. As one of its major outcomes, the 2024 Youth Call to Action variously calls for innovation to address challenges, particularly in agrifood systems, and further calls for fostering a “culture of innovation.”
- The Youth Climathon: challenged over 100 regional youth to develop innovative climate action solutions before the APFSD, ultimately presenting four solutions surrounding urban resilience, climate-smart agriculture, and natural ecosystem preservation to a multistakeholder panel at the forum. The energy, engagement, ingenuity, and dedication displayed by the participants proved the need and appetite to foster a “culture of innovation.”

These two events supported the identification of gaps and key priorities for youth empowerment and participation in governance in Asia-Pacific and recommendations will feed into the Asia-Pacific regional session of the 2024 ECOSOC Youth Forum.
